

PERSPECTIVES FROM OUR LEADERSHIP

Through its subsidiary, SCE, Edison International understands that we are only as successful as the communities we serve. So when we invest in communities, we are also investing in our talent pipeline, customers, team members and an improved quality of life for everyone where we live and work. We take actions — from team members volunteering to grants to nonprofit board service — to build resilient communities across central, coastal and Southern California.

Today, our commitments reflect our business strategy by focusing on areas of need that align with Edison International's priorities to address wildfire risk and the effects of climate change; accelerate clean power and electrification; support workforce development, build our pipeline of diverse talent and empower the STEM leaders of tomorrow; strengthen diversity, equity and inclusion in our company and communities; and increase public safety, among other priorities.

In 2020, as our communities faced new, unprecedented challenges stemming from the COVID-19 pandemic and from climate change-driven effects, such as increased wildfires, we adjusted our charitable giving to ensure we continued to deliver help where it's needed most. For example, we invested in bridging the digital divide by helping more people communicate and learn online and reducing food insecurity, both of which were exacerbated during the pandemic, and building wildfire resilience during a year of record fires. We also increased investments to support social and racial justice and heightened our focus on diversity, equity and inclusion in response to the disproportionate effects of the pandemic on communities of color, as well as the killings of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery and others.

No matter the year, there remains one constant: We are guided by the knowledge that we thrive when our communities thrive. We're pleased to share some of our efforts to build resilient communities for all.
